Rope bottle sling

This is an easy little project that can be used in many ways. I got this idea from The King of Random Youtube channel.The supplies you will need are a 2x2 piece of wood, a smooth plastic bottle and a knife. The tools you will need are a saw, scissors, another knife, a chisel and a hammer. Cut the wood about 4 inches longCut the wood with the grain through about an inch deep, then turn it over and cut it sideways halfway. Then use a chisel and cut a corner. Tuck the knife into the wood as shown in the photo with about a space of 1/8 inch below (if you make the space smaller it won't really work.) Now using the other knife cut the bottom from a smooth bottle and use scissors to clean the cut. Put the bottle in the wood as in the photo. With one hand hold the knife and with the other push the bottle through until a strip comes out. Then pull the strip and keep pulling. (this part is a bit difficult, so keep trying and you'll get it. Also make sure the edges are clean at the bottom of the bottle.) Plastic PET bottles at the end of their shelf life usually face two options: they are thrown into landfills (which poses a threat to the environment) or are recycled (better option than landfill). But there is a third option (much better in my humble opinion) which is reuse. These containers can be reused in many fun and creative ways and I'm sure www.instructables.com already has a lot of instructible for it. One thing you can do with a plastic bottle is rope. This type of rope is quite strong and has shrink properties. I've tried to do some contraption in the past to cut pet bottles to make ropes. The results have been poor. Either the contraption was bulky and required a table or vice to fix it in place or the rope jammed somewhere during cutting and broke. After many prototypes I made a simple, efficient and portable device. You can have it with you in a backpack, in the car or in your zombie apocalypse survival kit;-). Sling TV is one of the best-known and lowest-priced live TV options these days (plans start at $30 per month for 47 channels), which helps it stand out as the streaming services market has become busier. The high-end plan, which costs $45, offers 53 channels including ESPN, is even cheaper than most. Sling TV SpecificationsOnce point: $30 per month Supported devices: Roku, Amazon Fire TV, Apple TV, Xbox One Cloud DVR: 10 hours free, $5 per month for 50 hours Simultaneous streaming: 1 (Sling Orange), up to 3 (Sling Blue), up to 4 network channels (Sling Orange + Blue): NBC and Fox in some regions Sling TV isn't as smooth or easy to use as some of its competitors like YouTube TV or Philo TV, but it does the job (and it's available on all major platforms). While the channel selection is decent and the video quality is excellent, where Sling TV lags behind the competition is in its DVR memory. But if you only want the higher cable channels, and the to add specific networks according to your preferences, Sling TV (especially its upper floor) could be the perfect alternative to cable TV. These are the best streaming devicesSling TV review: Sling TV prices and availability offers a seven-day free trial, but there is a sneaky trick to doing so: you can't register through the web, you need to register through a Sling-compatible device (more on the one below). After the process, Sling offers $10 off the first month for all three of his plans. The lower levels, Sling Orange and Blue, both cost $30 per month but offer 24:00 of somewhat different channels. The high-level plan, Sling Orange & Blue, costs $45 a month. (Image credit: Sling TV) If you're interested in watching live local programming from tv networks, Sling Blue and Sling Orange & Blue provide access to NBC and Fox in some markets (which you can check out here). If you're not in one of those markets or also want ABC and CBS, Sling offers packages that include an HD and AirTV antenna (which integrates local feeds with the Sling app), but require upfront payment for three months of the Sling service. In contrast, YouTube TV costs $49.99 per month for access to up to over 70 channels. Hulu with LIVE TV costs $54.99 per month for over 60 channels. Fubo TV costs $54.99 for 108 channels. All three services offer (most) local networks in most areas as part of their plans. Sling's channel prices and lineup are more like Philo, which costs $20 for 59 channels (no locals and no antenna add-ons). (Image credit: Sling TV) As for availability, Sling TV can be played on many devices, in addition to its AirTV Mini:Web (Chrome, Safari)iPhone and iPad browsers (iOS 11 and later)Most Android phones and tablets (OS KitKat 4.4 and later)Apple TV (4th generation and later)Roku (LT and later)Smart TV (LG, Samsung, Roku, Fire TV , Vice and some Android TVs)Fire TV (all models)Fire Tablet (Android 4.4.2 and later operating system)Select Chromebook devicesAll ChromecastGoogle Nest Hub and Nest Hub Devices MaxOculus Go (3.54 or later)Xbox One, Xbox One S and Xbox One XXfinity X1Che is a pretty complete list, but missing PlayStation 4 (which only has YouTube TV). Unlike most of its competitors, Sling TV users cannot create multiple accounts under a single subscription. Sling Orange users can watch on only one screen at a time, while Sling Blue users can stream up to three screens at once. Sling Orange + Blue subscribers can watch simultaneously on four screens at a time.6 TIPS for streaming TV without while you can share your Sling login with family and friends, you need to be careful about simultaneous viewing. And everyone's viewing preferences and recordings will be thrown together, which makes DVR storage extremely limited even more of a pain. Learn more about this later. Sling TV review: Interface Perhaps because it's been in the live TV streaming market for some time, Sling doesn't seem to have made updates to its interface to keep up with the competition. Competition. Low-cost live TV service Philo is much more slicker. The big guns, YouTube TV and Hulu With Live TV, both boast deep and rich experiences. When Sling opens, see my TV screen for the first time, which is divided into sections: My Channels, Recordings, Recommended For You and collections such as Top News and Hit Movies. (Image credit: Sling TV) In navigation, you can select On Now, which shows live programming broken down into genres, such as Kids, Lifestyle, and Comedy. This screen is quite useless, unless you are the type of viewer who decides what to watch saying, I am in the mood for Action and Adventure. More useful is the Help screen, which is the typical cable-like grid with a vertical list of networks and horizontal times. But the networks aren't literate, so finding your favorite channels can be a bit of a hunt. The Sports screen is exactly what it looks like and is divided into segments by the type of sport (for example, Pro Basketball, Combat Sports, eSports, Obscure Sports). On the web and on some devices, there is also a Rentals screen, where you can rent movies, just like you can do on Amazon Prime or Apple TV. Rental prices are typical, generally $5.99 for new versions. A search box is located at the top right of the web navigation bar. Searching isn't as fast as YouTube TV, nor does it produce robust results (for example it doesn't include related videos), but it works well. (Image credit: Sling TV) Once you find a show or movie and click on it, a window appears with information such as a synopsis and a cast list. Depending on whether the show is broadcast live, you can watch or record. Sling gives you the ability to record only new episodes or all episodes, which gives him the edge over Philo. And once you get to the playback window, it is quite standard with the usual controls. Sling TV review: Sling's channel lineup content and channels are decent, not as robust as its cheaper competitors YouTube TV and Hulu With Live TV, but better than lower-level livestreaming services like Philo. Sling Orange and Sling Blue's channel offerings overlap largely, but both have networks that the other doesn't. Orange includes ESPN, ESPN2, ESPN3, Disney Channel, and Freeform (basically, Disney-owned networks). Blue provides access to more unique networks, such as USA, Bravo, Fox News, FX, E!, National Geographic, and Syfy. (Image credit: Sling TV) Of course, if I sign up for Sling Orange + Blue, you get all of the above. And as mentioned, if you want local channels, both Blue and Orange & Blue offer NBC and Fox in some regions. But for the rest, you need to buy a package of HD antennas. There are also a number of additional packages, which allow you to select content groupings to get closer to a Complete:Starz (six channels for $9 per month)Showtime (nine channels for $10 per month)EPIX (four channels for $5 per month)Sports Extra ($10 per month) - MLB Network, NBA TV, SEC NetworkComedy Extra ($5 per month) - MTV, CMT, TV LandKids LandKids ($5 per month) — Disney Junior, Nick Jr., BoomerangNews Extra ($5 per month) — BBC World News, HLN, RT AmericaLifestyle Extra ($5 per month) — Cooking Channel, Hallmark Channel, BETHollywood Extra ($5 per month) — Sundance TV, TCM, ReelzHeartland Extra ($5 per month) — Outdoor Channel, Sportsman Channel, Ride TVInternational ($5 per month) — channels from Europe, India, China, moreEspanol ($5 per month) — Azteca, Cine Latino, NBC UniverseDeportes ($5 per month) — LaLiga , Ligue 1, Superliga Argentina, moreSling also offers the 4 Extras offer - bundling Kids Extra, Lifestyle Extra, Comedy Extra and News Extra - for $12. For $20 more, you can add the total TV offer (all the extras and Cloud DVR Plus). Sling can also choose from 22 channels (listed here) to add to la carte, starting at $3, on their plan. Sling TV review: DVR The downside #1 of Sling is that it only gives you 10 hours of DVR storage for free with each subscription. Subscribers can upgrade to 50 hours for $5 per month. This puts Sling behind all his competitors on live TV. YouTube TV and Philo both offer unlimited DVR. Hulu With Live TV Cloud DVR comes with 50 free hours, and a 200-hour upgrade costs $15.At less Sling allows you to choose whether to record all or just new episodes, otherwise those 10 free hours might fill up in one day. In this era of cable cutting arm, a maximum of 50 hours of DVR storage is paltry. Sling TV review: TV videoSling quality doesn't have detailed information about its streaming resolution, although most of the content I watched seemed to be 720p, which is pretty standard among livestreaming services. Only Fubo YouTube TV offers some channels at 1080p; Fubo also offers limited events and some on-demand content in 4K. (Image Credit: Sling TV)Programs reached HD resolution almost instantly or within 2-3 seconds and held firm after stabilization, both on a fast home connection and on smaller networks. Sling TV review: VerdictSling TV is an interesting option for dust cutters who want to replace their cable TV package with a live TV streaming service. The low cost of the Sling Orange and Sling Blue plans makes them affordable, as long as you like their channel ings. The top-tier Sling Orange & Blue is only slightly more expensive and provides access to most major cable channels, including ESPN. The flexibility to add a la carte channels and extras to the competition, as well as premium networks, means Sling users can mix and match to suit their preferences. The biggest drawback we encountered during our Sling TV review is the meagre DVR storage, which is a not insignificant issue. But if you want live TV at a relatively low price, Sling TV be your path to cut the cable forever. Good. Good.
